

Tara finds her Stars

Illustrated by Shikha Nambiar

Written by Mala Kumar and
Manisha Chaudhry

‘Tara finds her Stars’ by Mala Kumar and Manisha Chaudhry
© Pratham Books, 2015. Some rights reserved. CC-BY 4.0

Illustrations: Shikha Nambiar
© Shikha Nambiar, 2015. Some rights reserved. CC-BY 4.0

Second English Edition: 2015

ISBN: 978-93-5022-452-6

Typesetting and layout by: Pratham Books, New Delhi

Printed by: JK Offset Graphics Pvt. Ltd., New Delhi

Published by: Pratham Books
www.prathambooks.org

Registered Office:
PRATHAM BOOKS
621, 2nd Floor, 5th Main, OMBR Layout
Banaswadi, Bengaluru 560 043
T: +91 80 42052574 / 41159009

Regional Office:
New Delhi
T: +91 11 41042483

Some rights reserved. The story text and the illustrations are CC-BY 4.0 licensed which means you can download this book, remix illustrations and even make a new story - all for free! To know more about this and the full terms of use and attribution visit <http://prathambooks.org/cc>.

PRATHAM BOOKS

Tara finds her Stars

Illustrated by Shikha Nambiar

Written by Mala Kumar and
Manisha Chaudhry

Tara could not sit still! The train seemed to be going very slowly. Tara peered out through the window. Lights winked from windows in tall buildings. As everyone in the bogey prepared to sleep, one passenger asked Tara, "Beti, I hope you are not running away from home?"

"No, no!" said Tara. Early in the morning, Tara got off the train at Meenapur.

She walked towards the banks of the river Ganga and got into a crowded boat. "Who could this girl be, travelling all alone?" wondered many people on the boat. As Tara got out, the boatman asked, "Have you run away from home?"

Tara smiled and said, "No, no, Sir, I am going home!"

Tara came to a forest. She took out her camera. A deer looked at her and seemed to be asking what she was doing there! Tara aimed her camera and clicked. "I've come home, dear deer, I've come home to the village of my ancestors."

As the sun set, Tara started walking on a rope bridge. The bridge swung gently with her steps. She smiled as she thought of what awaited her on the other side.

Once on the other side, Tara stopped to take out her map and plan her way forward.

She closed her eyes and took a deep breath. Ah, the earthy smell of green trees and plants in this forest was lovely!

Tara made a small bonfire. She ate some food that she had packed and settled down under the sky. Stars twinkled like friends. Tomorrow she would cross the forest by foot, and then take a bus to the village where her great grandparents lived. For today, Tara Prakash, famous wildlife photographer, was just going to sleep under the stars and dream about home.

Dear Reader,

Have you tried counting the stars? How many stars do you think you can count?

If you had to stay alone in a forest, name some of the things that you should have with you.

Which are the days in a month when stars are most visible to the eye? Why?

This story has been inspired by an entry to an illustration contest conducted by Pratham Books. Hundreds of such illustrations and stories, are now available for free on Pratham Books' open-source repository of digital stories — StoryWeaver.
www.storyweaver.org.in Pratham Books was set up in 2004, as part of the Read India movement, a nation-wide campaign to promote reading among children. Pratham Books is a not-for-profit organization that publishes quality books for children in multiple Indian languages. Our mission is to see "a book in every child's hand" and democratize the joy of reading. If you would like to contribute to our mission, please email us at info@prathambooks.org.

Mala Kumar is a journalist, writer and editor who enjoys playing with words, and with children—and likes it best if she is playing with both together.

Manisha Chaudhry is an author, editor and translator. When she needs to rejuvenate, she rushes off to the mountains to trek and to catch up with Urdu poetry.

Shikha Nambiar was a corporate lawyer before she chose to professionally pursue her passion for art and design at the Srishti School of Art, Design and Technology. Her special skills lie in detailed illustration, print and branding. She believes that exploring new places and cultures enriches her work.

Do you like sleeping under the stars? Tara does!
Join her as she makes an exciting journey.

Learning to read – level by level. This is a Level 3 book.

Beginning to Read/
Read Aloud

For very young children who are eager to begin reading and listening to stories

1

Learning to Read

For children who recognize familiar words and can read new words
with help

2

Reading Proficiently

For older children who can read with confidence

4

Reading Independently

For children who
are ready to read
on their own

3

PRATHAM BOOKS

Pratham Books is a not-for-profit organization that publishes books in multiple Indian languages to promote reading among children.

www.prathambooks.org

Tara finds her Stars

(English)

MRP: ₹ 30.00

